Mitchell Museum Offers Free Admission to Military Families

The Mitchell Museum of the American Indian, 3001 Central St., Evanston, will offer free admission to active-duty members of the U.S. military and their immediate families through Sept. 1 as part of the national Blue Star Museums summer program, a collaboration between the arts and military communities.

Mitchell Museum exhibits on view during the 2013 Blue Star Museums program are "The War of 1812: Fighting for Their Homeland," through August 25; "Another View of American Indian Fine Art," through September 1; "New Treasures of Our Collection," through September 8, and the ongoing "Did You Know They're Native?," a photo gallery of noteworthy Native Americans from different walks of life, with a new edition opening July 27. Information is available by calling 847-475-1030 or e-mailing visitorservices@mitchellmuseum.org.
